Budget Tie Vote Presents Brandt With New Crisis

By David Binder

BONN, April 28 ONYT).—The government of Chancellor Willy Brandt lost a vote in the Bundestag for the first time in its 30-month existence today as the lower house split down the middle, 247-247, on a motion to approve the Federal Chancellery budget. The tie vote, which developed when a Free Democrat defector from the governing coalition. Knut von Kühlmann-Stumm, ab-stained, plunged the parliamentary system into its gravest crisis.

since the Bonn government was constituted 23 years ago.

The stalemate left the Bundestag temporarily paralyzed and unable to agree for a time even on how or when to resume debate on the federal budget.

After much confusion, the Social-Free Democratic coalition reached agreement with the Christian Democratic opposition shortly after 3 p.m. to postpone further debate on the budget until Tuesday.

Eve of Ratification

That is the day before the Bundestag is scheduled to begin decisive deliberations on ratification of the government's holly contested 1970 goodwill treaties with the Soviet Union and Poland. The Social Democratic chancellor and his Free Democratic coalition partner. Foreign Minister Walter Scheel, conferred at the Federal Chancellery on ways out of the current crisis, including the possibility of new, interim elections.

After four and a half hours, the conference ended. Its only result was that the two men agreed to meet again next week to discuss all points of dispute, according to Conrad Ahlers, the government's chief spokesman.

The parliamentary impasse was brought about by Rainer Barzel just 24 hours after he was defeated by two votes in his attempt to unseat Mr. Brandt with a no-confidence ballot, He and his supporters-some of them, like the former Christian Democratic labor minister, Hans Katzer, screaming in near hysteria—demanded a vote to show up the government's lack of a workable majority.

Three Crucial Votes

So it came to the test. One former coalition deputy, the Free Democratic party industrialist Gerhard Klenbaum, absented himself. Baron von Kühlmann-Stumm, a millionaire farmer, abstained and a third Free Democratic waverer, Wilhelm Helms, cast his vote along with the opposition's 246, creating the tie.

Both Mr. Kienbaum and Baron von Küblmann-Stumm said that they would quit the Bundestag—the former before the crucial treaty ratification vote and the latter afterward. Since Mr. Helms has said that he approved the treaties, the Brandt government appeared to be in a position this evening to ram through ratification next week with the needed 249 votes.

That, above all, is what Chancellor Brandt and Foreign Minister

Nominally, they can be launched only through the chancellor demanding a confidence vote, and, losing it, asking the federal president to call new elections. However, the constitution also makes it possible for an opposition as numerically strong as Mr.

Barzel's Christian Democrats to bypass a chancellor's call for elections with a no-confidence vote. A solution, put forward tonight by one of the capital's leading journalists, Hans Roderick Schneider, was a constitutional amendment approved by all parties, permitting dissolution of the Bund-

U.S., EEC End Trade Talks Amid General Satisfaction

BRUSSELS, April 28 (IHT). -Two days of talks between Common Market leaders and a three-man U.S. delegation led by Nathaniel Samuels, outgoing deputy under secretary of state for economic affairs, wound up today with both sides expressing satisfaction about progress made.

It was intended that they should begin as soon as possible after the Common Market's slated enlargement in January of next year, but Mr. Samuels hinted strongly today that the United States would not be ready to participate until late 1973 or pos-

He cited the presidential election and a protectionist-minded Congress as two main reasons for delay. Community officials recalled how long it took Congress to pass the recent gold bill, a measure which was relatively cut and dried by comparison with the expected complexities of trade legislation. They concurred that the talks would begin later than they had hoped. Mr. Samuels made it clear that America's long-term aim was to create a world free trade area which would have the effect of arising from the negotiations now

OXFORD, England, April 28 (NYT)—Ending 750 years of tradition five of Oxford's men's colleges have decided to admit their first women undergraduates on an experimental basis beginning in 1974.

The Autonomous University was the second Spanish campus to be closed down temporarily this week. On Monday, academic authorities announced the closing down of Zaragoza University.

The blast destroyed two shops and smashed the store fronts in a two-block stretch, including the presbytery of St. Mary's Catholic Church. Dating from 1783, the presbytery is one of the oldest buildings in Belfast.

Social Worker John Keely said Catholics of Belfast's Shortstrand-Mount Pottinger district were sending their women and children to the Falls Road area in fear that continuing attacks by Protestants would engulf their small enclave. The 6.000 Cath-olics of Shortstrand-Mount Pottinger are surrounded by the homes of 60,000 Protestants.

Streets in the enclave were littered with broken bottles, stones, iron bars and glass today in the aftermath of a seven-hour battle between police and Protestants.

The trouble flared when gangs of youths—distinguishable in their blue-denim jackets, jeans and paratrooper-style boots-surged into the Catholics' Shortstrand road, hurling bricks at a bar and wrenching down wire netting over its windows. When customers poured out they came under a hail of bricks and stones. Police moved to separate the factions. One policeman was taken to a hospital after being hit on the head with a brick. Several youths were arrested and troops were called in to back up the police.

Newsmen and photographers covering the riot were chased by angry Protestants.

"Bloody Kennedyites," shouted the Protestants at American newsmen, in a reference to Sen. Edward Kennedy's attacks on British policy in Northern Ireland.

Comment on Amnesty

Leaders of both religious communities today gave a grudging welcome to yesterday's decision by William Whitelaw, Britain's secretary of state for Northern Ireland, to lift the ban on parades.

The Rev. Martin Smyth, grand master of the Protestants Orange Order said the ban should never have been imposed "but I deplore the amnesty for those who have broken the law."

Ivan Cooper, an opposition member of the province's suspended Parliament, said Mr. Whitelaw would have to ban some traditional Protestant parades or risk violence.

"It would be impossible to hold an Orange parade through Londonderry." Mr. Cooper said. referring to the province's second city, which has a heavy Catholic

Nor was there any sweetness for Mr. Barzel in the news from across the country: 15,000 applicants this week for membership in Mr. Brandt's Social Democratic party, a torchlight parade of several hundred in Bonn late last night for the chancellor and Foreign Minister Scheel, more pro-government demonstrations in major cities and thousands of letters and telegrams pouring into the capital on behalf of the coalition.

A martial law court today charged 23 men with complicity in the kidnapping of three NATO radar technicians—two Britons and a Canadian—who were killed by left-wing extremists who seized them last month.

The 23 are also accused of attempting to overthrow the constitution by force, a charge which carries a death penalty.

The court freed 11 other people the security forces had detained following the kidnapping near the Black Sea town of Unye on

The so-called Turkish Peoples Liberation Army shot the hostages at close range before security forces moved in to storm their mountain hideout. Nine leftwingers were killed in a gun battle with the security forces. The technicians had been working on a Turkish defense project.

Agnew Criticizes Democrats Lacking 'Enthusiam' for U.S.

By Maxwell Wiesenthal

AUGUSTA, Maine, April 28 (WP).-Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew today came to the home-state of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie asked his audience question: Wouldn't it be nice if we had a country we can love, believe in, work for and die

'News for Senator'

"Well, I have news for the senator. We have such a country. It is called the United States of America." he said as the delegates cheered.

Quoting statements by Democratic senators following the U.S. escalation of bombing of North Vietnam earlier this month, Mr. Agnew said: "Those Democratic senators have difficulty thinking anything derogatory to say about the ruthless nation that has already invaded three neighbors. Kleindienst Vote Delay Expected

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, April 23 ard G. Kleindienst as attorney general is unlikely to come to a Senate sources said today.

The nomination, approval of which was reaffirmed by the Senate Judiciary Committee in an 11-to-4 vote yesterday after to o months of bitter hearings, is expected to meet a variety of delays including a possible filibuster by Senate liberals.

The first of these delays came early today when the assistant majority leader. Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D., W.Va., told newsmen that a Democratic senator, one of the four who had voted against recommending confirmation by the judiciary panel, had ask-d that a "hold" be placed on the

A "hold" is a request for a delay in Senate consideration of an action and is automatically honored for at least a week and sometimes longer.

Votes Against Kleindienst

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D., Mass.; Sen, Birch Bayh, D., Ind.; Sen. John V. Tunney, D., Calif., and Sen. Quentin N. Burdick, D., N.D., voted against the nomination.

Sen. Byrd also told reporters that, at the present time, he did not think a filibuster against the nomination would be successful and indicated that he thought that administration forces could muster the necessary two-thirds majority to choke off debate if it dragged on for too long.

He said that debate could run at least two or three weeks before a move would be made to shut it off.

Action on the nomination by the full Senate cannot start until the Judiciary Committee sends a report on its hearings to the Senate. The report, including minority views, is scheduled to be sent to the Senate by next Fri-

However, possible scheduling of a vote on the nomination won't occur until at least May 8 when the majority leader, Sen. Mike Mansfield, D., Mont., returns from a trip to China.
Sen. Mansfield has said that he would entertain a number of requests for "holds" on the nomination, each of which could de-lay action by at least a week. Apollo and the Bombers great drama and beauty in the penultimate Apollo mission to the moon. The awesome color of the lift-off, the suspense while an engine malfunction seemed to threaten the landing on the lunar surface, the manifest enthusiasm of the astronauts as they gamboled and worked in the stark highlands, the final, lovely resolution of the voyage, when the great parachutes opened and the spacecraft drifted down to the sea-all of these, visible and audible through the miracle of television, caught the imagination.

The triumph of Apollo-16 was by no means only aesthetic. Capt. Young, clearly aware of the criticism of the cost of space journeys, and conscious of the treasures of scientific information brought back by his craft, put it bluntly and accurately: "You got your money's worth on this one... that basic knowledge is pushing back the last real frontier, and by golly, that's essential to the survival of humanity on this planet."

Yet there was a cloud over Apollo-16. It was not only that this was one in a succession of moon landings—the fifth in less than three years; not only that many feel the $455 million the trip cost might have been better spent on earth. For one could see on the television screen both the incidents of this scientific journey in the interests of all mankind, and the loading of bombs on B-52s: one could reflect, watching the innocently triumphant erection of an American flag on the Descartes highlands, that that emblem had quite other connotations on ripples roll to unintended places.

Despite its growing familiarity, there was much of the earth; the journeying of the moon rover over soil on which human foot had never trod recalled tanks rumbling up Vietnamese roads, past mangled bodies and wasted villages.

> Nearly a century and a half ago, on July 12, 1776, Capt. James Cook sailed out of Plymouth, on what might be considered an 18th-century version of the moon flights-an attempt to find the clusive Northwest Passage. And the Resolution passed through a great fleet of warships and transports, loading to fight a war against the American colonists who had just declared their independence. The irony was not lost on the explorers, but it probably escaped those who were dispatching both the fleet and the Cook

> Yet there was another irony, unguessed by Cook and his crew. They, on their highminded quest for one of the earth's last frontiers, were carrying, in Alan Moorehead's phrase, a "fatal impact" to the Pacific peoples. The Americans could fight back the British who came in arms: the Polynesians could not fight the complex of disease and cultural shock that traveled with Cook.

This is not to say that the parallel must be exact; that evil may come out of the moonships, or any lasting good from the terrible war in Vletnam. But the ways of history are strange, and the judgment of one day is not necessarily that of a century later. Every action, as the Buddhists teach, is like the stone dropped into a pool-the

The fact that Rainer Barzel of the Christian Democratic Union fell two votes short of replacing Mr. Brandt in the Bundestag's "constructive vote of no confidence" was hardly a cause for rejoicing by the Social and Free Democratic coalition partners.

At least two Free Democrats deserted the government to vote for Mr. Barzel. One or more among many Christian Democrats either hostile to Mr. Barzel or opposed to bringing the no-confidence motion helped on this occasion to save the government. Nixon and Vietnamization

The U.S. President is known as a man who likes sudden or unexpected decisions. Yet it is clear that, a few weeks before his visit to Moscow and in the midst of an election campaign, his margin for maneuver is rather limited. His principal hope rests finally in an upsurge in resistance of the South Vietnamese Army and in an exhaustion—so far not in sight-of the Communist offensive. -From Les Echos (Paris).

Soviet-U.S. Diplomacy

Mr. Nixon's adviser convinced no one when he asserted that cancellation of the U.S. President's visit to Russia had never been contemplated: This actually was the only card Washington had available. If the Moscow visit is to take place, it means that the U.S. President will not lose face and that his immediate electoral future will not be jeopardized; this also speaks volumes for the influence exerted by the Kremlin on Hanol; and this confirms that the solution of the conflict cannot be of a military nature.

The Russians have needed Mr. Nixon too much recently. They have to offset the effect of the Sino-American rapprochement; they want to conclude with America a nuclear agreement that will relieve their finances while establishing their military parity with the United States: and they wish to benefit from increased trade and technological exchanges with the United States. The nature and diversity of their requirements place them in the position of askers. They have just brillantly reversed that position by acquiring unexpected trumps, for which Mr. Nixon will have to pay a high price. It is thus that the green light given by Moscow for Gen. Glap's offensive principally served Soviet interests. It is once again clear that the Vietnamese are not the masters of their own fate.

Kwame Nkrumah

Some of his detractors will say that Ghana was not ready for independence. But Ghana had had a much longer preparation than most African countries. In fact Mr. Nkrumah set himself an impossible task. Ghana's economy did not allow him to create the sort of state he believed to be necessary. Subsequent rulers elsewhere in Africa have lowered their sights, though sometimes with miserable results. It remains to Mr. Nkruman's credit that he played a major role in redeeming African people from a sense of inferiority which had come to be looked on as part of the natural order.

His policy is not only to get the American troops and prisoners out of there, but to defeat the Communist invasion, and "to prevent the imposition of a Communist regime on the people of South Vietnam against their

In short, Nimm will not leave the outcome to a test of arms between the North Vietnamese, and the South Vietnamese, with a South Vietnamese Army of over a million men, a South Vietnamese Air Force of over 1,000 planes and over 500 helicopter gunships, and total control of the

"We will not be defeated," Nixon said, "and we will never surrender our friends to Communist aggression." Well, "never" is a long time, especially in an election year, but Nixon sees the defeat of the enemy invasion and Communist aggression not only as a military issue between the two Vietnams, but as a moral issue for America which involves the honor of this nation and maybe even the peace of the world, and nobody can say this is not

In fact, Nixon has now said, in effect: This is where I stand, and if you want to change the policy, you will have to change the President. This is fair enough, and not a bad offer, but November is a long way off at the present rate of killing, and meanwhile somebody has to find a way out of this trap and try to change the question.

Presumably this is one important reason why Henry Kissinger sent to Moscow. He was trying to find out whether Nixon couldn't get a little help from the Soviet Union, which is supplying the modern arms to Hanci, to bring this war in Vietnam to an end, so that the major powers could get down to the really important world questions of controlling arms, avoiding war in the Middle East, establishing a security system in Europe, reorganizing the trade and monetary systems of the world, and easing the misery of the majority of the human race in the poor nations.

This is a fair question, When are we going to hear from the leaders of the Soviet Union on these larger elemental world questions? They have struggled out of unspeakable miseries and have suffered more than any other people on earth, and have now reached the pinnacle of world power, all in the lifetime of Brezhnev, Kosygin and Gromyko, They have not only survived but triumphed, yet they still seem to be trapped in the psychology of the Cold War even more than

nin, their ambassador in Washington, the Soviet leaders don't seem to know what has happened in Washington. There was a time when President Nixon, on the urging of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, thought about getting out of the Vietnam war with American bases at Kam Ranh Bay and Da Nang, which would maintain Western power in the Pacific after the Japanese had regained Okinawa, the British had pulled out of Singapore, and the Chinese had taken over Taiwan and come into their treaty rights at Hong Kong at the end of the century. But this is not the asking Brezhney and Moscow not

Maybe Moscow cannot control Hanoi, but it has made its point to Nixon that it will not allow the defeat of the North Vietnamese, and now Nixon has accented this and is asking them not to insist on settling the struggle by force of arms.

The President is being pressed now by his opponents for the presidency to make more concessions, and to put the unification of his country ahead of his support of Saigon, and with good reason, but Moscow, as one of the two great power centers of the world, also has its responsibilities, and, so far, it has been even less flexible than the President.

The immediate problem is fairly clear. It is to end the killing and the diversion of Vietnam and get on to the really important questions of controlling military arms, population, and poverty. What Nixon has done in his last speech is merely to state the old questions, and dramatize the old confrontation. But he is trying, after his fashion, to get on to the larger questions, and he has asked the Soviet leaders: When are you going to help? When are Washington and Moscow going to get down to the questions that unite the world instead of secondary questions, like Vietnam, that divides the great powers? He is ready to endorse Mc-Govern publicly if and when his support would really make a difference, but that step is not likely to come before the convention. He is determined not to be nominee himself this year.

nedy has outlined to friends in private conversations in the last few days. They can be taken as authoritative expressions of his Whether other politicians and the public will finally accept the conclusion that Ted Kennedy is carefully positioning himself for his own nomination is another question. There is an abiding suspicion in the country that he hopes to be a compromise choice this July. Every new turn in the primary campaign brings fresh speculation about a Kennedy candidacy.

Kennedy is of course aware of the suspicions about his intentions, and bothered by them. He has in fact told friends that, if a stalemate seemed to be developing between McGovern and Sen. Hubert Humphrey, he could be pushed into an early Hubert Humphrey, he McGovern endorsement—to avoid any appearance of hanging back in hones for himself.

Otherwise, his present feeling is that an early endorsement could be a doubtful asset to McGovern. It might be resented campaign that has until now been a very personal achieve-McGovern's success Kennedy tells friends, has been to do it on his own: he has to go on showing that he can do it. That view fits with the past Kennedy family practice, which has generally been to avoid favoring particular candidates in intraparty contests. Kennedy has 1972 nomination race so far, aithough it was no secret that he and his family like George Mc-Govern. There have been Kennedy men working for all three of the leading candidates-Mc-Govern, Humphrey and Edmund

Muskie The collapse of the Muskle candidacy has increased the pressure on Kennedy to make a choice between the remaining competi-tors, Humphrey and McGovern. The natural family affinity for McGovern has become a public fact as Robert Kennedy's daughter Kathleen, a junior at Radcliffe, has begun campaigning for McGovern has not yet pressed for a Kennedy endorsement. But it clearly could be of great value to him now, as he goes into the primaries in the big industrial states of Ohio, California and New York. Kennedy as a campaigner would have an opening to the groups that McGovern especially needs to attract, blacks and ethnic industrial workers.

In discussing the situation with associates, Kennedy gives two answers to the argument for an early declaration of support: that McGovern has to broaden his appeal on his own, not as a Kennedy man, and that he is likely to be able to do just that.

Like other professionals, Kennedy thinks McGovern's need now is to show the older forces in the Democratic party-and especially George Meany of the AFL-CIOthat he is not a rigid, doctrinaire candidate. But Kennedy, unlike some others, believes McGovern must hold to his positions on the war, tax reform and defense budget cuts, making his firmness a contrast to Humphrey.

Kennedy thinks McGovern can reassure the party elders without allenating his own supporters. He thinks that McGovern will win in California and New York and that the momentum will then certainly carry him through to the nomination.

The hard question for Edward Kennedy is what he would do if that scenario did not work out -if McGovern faltered and the convention seemed to be heading toward Humphrey or a stalemate.

No Personal Dislike

Kennedy has no personal dislike for Hubert Humphrey and would support him if nominated. But it is clear that a Humphrey candidacy would turn the Democratic party back from the direction in which it has been moving and would be anathema to the younger forces with which Kennedy has identified himself. The disastrous division and bitterness of 1968 would almost certainly be repeated.

Those are the reasons that will be put to Kennedy for running himself if McGovern slips. All that can be said at this point is that Kennedy does not think he will slip and does not want to face the question.

There is certainly no external sign tht Kennedy wants the nomination in 1972. He has been enjoying and using the freedom of a noncandidate to take tough positions on such issues as amnesty for draft-resisters. His family is evidently concerned about the question of his physical safety if he did become the candidate. He is only 40, and he can wait four or eight years in the knowledge that time will let Chappaquiddick fade and give his political persona more weight.

We are most of us prisoners of the telephone, and to my astonishment I discovered that at this expensive Washington hotel it was impossible to sit down in the living room and use the tele-phone. You see, the telephone cord was only four feet long, not six feet long, which would have been enough to reach over to the couch where you work. So that every time the phone rings, or every time you need to ring out on it, you have to stand un. and tightrope your way into the corridor toward the door and the sinewy telephone stand on which the phone perches. From that position, however, you could not take notes on the conversation, write down the research you were hunting down, indeed if you had to come up with an explanation for it you could only suppose that the telephone was placed where it was for the convenience of those who wanted to murmur an assignation out of earshot of the general company, so-FLASH!-I dialed the assistant manager, whose number sat staring me in the face because it was one of those telephones that have everything written on the dial except funeral director.

And I said: Look, something is obviously wrong. The telephone lineman obviously made a mistake, there is no reason why your telephone should fail to extend to where people would want to use the telephone, could you please do something about it?

I waited three hours, during thich of course nothing happe ed, and then I dialed again: no answer. I could not afford to wait there in the solitary confinement of the telephone chamber for very long, so I dialed Western Union and to my great surprise reached it, and sent the message to the assistant manager, full rate, "WHEN YOU RESUME TELEPHONE SERVICE WOULD APPRECIATE YOUR CALLING ME AT ROOM 259 IN RE CONTINUING PROB-

Goldwater Comments

As author of the 1970 Voting Amendment on behalf of Americans abroad, I would like to comment on the interesting article by James Goldsborough (IFT, April 11) and state that the report published by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce accurately describes my purpose in writing the statute. Regular readers of your paper well know that a law enfranchising Americans overseas is a new concept which states must administer for the first time in the 1972 presidential election. Therefore, it is not unexpected that there will be some confusion about the new statute until its requirements are resolved by the courts.

Nevertheless, there is no doubt as to what I and 29 other senators who joined with me in offering the amendment meant for it to do. In short, the congressional intent was to secure the right to vote for President for any U.S. citizen who is temporarily absent abroad so long as he intends to return to the general place of his last physical presence and retains a present intent to be a voting resident of that locality. This includes, for example, an American who roes abroad for a two weeks' or even six months' vacation which will take him away from the polling on election day. His state should give him a special presi-dential absentee ballot if he applies, either in person or by mail, no later than seven days preceding the election. Similarly, the citizen may be a businessman whose employer has acsigned him overseas for a short period or he may be a student who is temporarily studying in a foreign country. In either case, he should be provided with an absentee ballot upon application, Moreover, each of the above citizens should be allowed to register absentee, by mail if necessary, if he applies no later than 30 days before the election, or within the usual state time for closing its registration rolls, whichever date is closer to election day.

In addition, the new law is meant to cover the citizen who may be absent from home for two or three years or more and who may no longer retain a dwelling in the state from which he departed. I purposefully spelled out in great detail during Senate debate the purpose of securing the right to vote, for any American outside the United States who intends to return to the general area of his last residence and who currently holds an intent as being a voting resident of that state, on the same terms now applied to servicemen in every state.

The main thrust of my explanations of the law, and indeed the actual text of the statute, were meant to guarantee that citizens shall no longer be denied the right to vote "because of the failure of such citizen to be physically present" in a state on election day. In light of this clear legislative history, I am confident the Supreme Court will eventually set the matter straight by endorsing a broad interpretation of the 1970 law. BARRY GOLDWATER, BELLINGHAM, Wash, April 28 (UPI)—Rogan Jones, 76, whose career in broadcasting included winning a U.S. Supreme Court decision on the right to broadcast news, died yesterday of pneumonia.

Mr. Jones purchased Bellingham radio station KVOS, now KCMI, in 1929. He gained naticnwide acclaim several years later when he took, to the Supreme Court the right for racio stations to air the news and won the case.

Mr. Jones also was founder of KVOS Channel 12 television in Bellingham, a station near the Canadian border which is heavily viewed in the Vancouver, B.C., area. He owned radio stations in five other Pacific Coast cities, including KPG, Wenatchee,

Mr. Jones started the first U.S. television cable system in the 1940s. He also developed a system for automated radio stations utilizing taped programs, now common in the United States.

Iceland Offers To Stage All Of Title Chess

AMSTERDAM, April 28 (AP). -Iceland is offering to stage both frequent critic of Romania's matches in the world chess title series between Boris Spassky of Russia and the challenger, Bobby Fischer of the United States, a spokesman for the International Chess Federation said today.

The offer, received two days ago, was made on condition that both Spassky and Fischer are firmly prepared to play the en-tire match in Iceland."

Under an earlier agreement half of the 24-game match was to have been played in the Irelancic capital of Reykjarik and half in Belgrade. But Beigrade backed out after Pischer demanded a share in profit above the $138,000 originally agreed on. The Soviet Chess Federation is backing the Icelandic suggestion. No decision is expected from the chess federation until next week when its president, Max Euwe, returns from a world tour.

Buchwald's Columns Are No Joke In India, But That's Western Art

NEW DELHI, April 28 (AP).-Indo-American relations are bad, but American columnist Art Buchwald is making them worse. The problem is that some Indians take the humorist Mr. Buchwald wrote after the India-Pakistan war last December that the pro-Pakistan policy of the Nixon administration was the product of a commitment former President Lyndon B. Johnson made to a Pakistani camel driver during a visit to Karachi as vice-president a decade ago.

Irate Indians bombarded newspaper editors in protest. Now the syndicated columnist's mischief has reached the Indian Parliament, this time because Mr. Buchwald "revealed" the existence of an "anti-protocol office" in the State Department, headed by a Horace Bitterman, a former guard as

In his column, Mr. Buchwald indicated that the "antiprotocol office" may have been used to harass Indian Ambassador L. K. Jha as part of the anti-India "tilt" ordered by the White House to protest India's invasion of East Pakistan, now Bangladesh.

According to Mr. Buchwald, the "anti-protocol office" sometimes orders the Washington Sanitation Department not to pick up garbage from embassies in disfavor with the White House or arranges for subway drilling teams to work outside their ambassadors' residences during the night to keep them This week, after Prime Minister Indira Gandhi tolci Parllament she had no objections to an iroprovement in Indo-American relations, one legislator took issue with her by citing the Buchwald column. "The prime minister is saying that there is every possibility of restoration of mutual understanding between the government of the United States and the government of India," said Krishna Manoharan, a member of a regional party from southern Tamil Nadu State, intervening in the annual debate on the Foreign Ministry's appropriations. "I have got my doubts. So far, no signs are visible."

But, he added, "I am sure understanding can be reached between the United States and India, minus Nixon, because I want to show how mean, how low, Mr. Nixon has been, and is, and how his administration is functioning very callously,

"Here is an account which would be interesting to read and it would be very helpful to understand the content, the color, the character or culture of the Nixonian administration." Then, Mr. Manoharan read a Buchwald column about the treatment of Indian diplomats in Washington.

THE ART MARKET

English Dealers Branching Out in Zurich

By Souren Melikian

ZURICH, April 28 (IHT).-Spink's decision to open a new gallery in Zurich at 12 Schifflände, Hechplatz, in the old district of the city, highlights the growing British involvement in the Continental art trade. As Adrian Maynard, the president of the new company, put it, the 300-year-old London fine art dealers established their Swiss subsidiary with a specific view to "getting closer to Continental potential buyers."

That this Zurich firm is of major importance to Spink's was obvious enough at the press opening yesterday. (The gallery opens to the public Saturday). The standard of quality of the works exhibited, mostly early sculpture from Southeast Asia, including Cambodia and Java, could hardly be higher. The selection of Indian bronzes and archaic Khmer statues is one of the most impressive I remember seeing in a single gallery. It definitely outstrips the objects from the same category now on view at 8 King Street, Saint Jomes's—Spink's London address. There are about 10 pieces of a kind one hardly ever sees on the market these days. A full standing figure of Shiva in the Bakheng style of the 10th cen-

There still lingers in it a memory of the Gupta style of India, except that the Khmer head has the inimitable smile that Indian carvers never which there is so much talk at gave up his career as a stylist pieces of Khmer art. So does UNESCO and elsewhere has yet to become a full-time dealer. He a long way to go.

Apart from Khmer and Thai sculpture, the other major category is Indian bronzes. To me absolute masterpiece is a standing figure of the Buddha which Isidor Kahane, the managmatch an extraordinary head of ing director of Galerie Spink, as it is called in Zurich, regards as a post-Gupta, i.e., a 7th to 8thcentury work from northern India at 120,000 Swiss francs. I thought it was the best buy in the whole show-certainly one for which major museums would compete, assuming they were not put off by any fears that the Indian government may one day raise questions about its prov-

> In contrast to the Southeast Asian sculpture, the selection of Chinese pottery and cloisonne enamels is very uninspired. Leaving aside a few objects, the works are of the kind one sees in virtually every decent shop dealing in Chinese art. Obviously the emphasis is on carvings from the Indian world. This is no accident and reflects the personality of the new manag-ing director, Isidor Kahane. His

the Zurich branch directorship is as sig-nificant as the decision to establish the branch. It means that the Zurich gallery is to be run on independent lines, 2: an autonomous unit. Kabane, born and educated in Zurich, now 50, spent half his life in New York. went to the States right after World War II and first worked as a textile stylist. There, he became interested in antiques and soon turned into a regular collector. After a flirt with primitive art, he went in for Chola bronzes of the 10th, 11th centuries from India and Khmer art-he still is a passionate collector. Gradually, he found it necessary to resell some of his quality pieces only, the assumption being that in order to see a masterpiece, a collector or museum curator does not mind going out of his way. Kahane, despite predictions of disaster, was proved right. He won a reputation as the man who always cornered some extraordinary bronze or statue-and sold some fine pieces to the Cleveland. Museum of Art, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, John D. Rockefeller and others. Last year he decided he wanted to come back to Zurich to give his children a European education. He says he also felt the need for a financial backing in a field where the continually skyrocketing prices for the top pieces in which he specializes made individual buying too hazardous. The number of potential buyers for an Indian carving priced at $200,000 is inevitably limitedpossibly to eight or ten, adding up museums and collectors—so that if for some reason one given plece is not desired by any of them for some time, a large sum of money remains tied up. Finally, Kahane realizing that the supply of his favorite pieces was dwindling, wished to expand into other fields such as Chinese obists d'art.

As a collector he knew Spink's The trend of his own thinking coincided with the British firm's awareness of the new Continental opportunities, and by October, 1971, the Zurich company was founded not just as a foreign branch but as a fullfledged Swiss corporation based in Zurich. Unlike the London firm with its many interests in objects to pay for his increas-ingly ambitious buys and, in 1966, ern art, classical antiquities,

English silver or numismatics, the Swiss firm is essentially a gallery dealing in Southeast Asian art. The objects displayed, selected by Kahane-he brought in some of his own finer pieceshave not been offered on the market before. In fact, Kahane says, a London collector interested in the field will have to make the trip to Zurich as would any other buyer from America or Europe,

The selection of Zurich as its Continental base by the British company emphasizes the growing importance of this city as a European art market. Marlborough Fine Arts, the London picture gallery, has already opened a branch here and Sotheby's now has an office here too. It seems to me that the gallery may have to branch out into new fields. as the protection of mational monuments become, more effective in Far Eastern countries. The present supply of carvings from Cambodia and Thailand, from which come the impertant Mon-Dyaravati sculptures, is obviously facilitated by the war, Things will change.

But whatever the new direction taken by the gallery, the high degree of specialization and quality will remain, setting the pace for the new type of trading on a high level which is the advanced dealer's answer to the competition from the suction

Peter Brook's Workshop

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss ... PARIS, April 28 THT, Le. Centre International de Reherche Thestrale, founded in 970 by Peter Brook in Paris, is omnosed of authors and actors, Firectors and designers from all ver the globe. The distinguished stritish director has abandoned all ther activities to serve as its uiding spirit. The company's nts have been conducted s secretly as wartime nuclear tudies. Only a favored few have een allowed a peek into the aboratory and the press has been ept out—with good reason. Never how an unfinished product.

Last Tuesday evening at the heatre Recamier, Mr. Brooks a special boon to the Theatre es Nations season—gave the ublic a first look at the work in hich he is now engrossed. Curisity has run high and it was ecessary to repeat the program nee times—between 6:30 p.m. nd 1 a.m.—to accommodate the

As an introduction to his experimental studio's achievements, Mr. Brook presented varying items from a day's work. These disclosed the ambitions and intended range of his players.

First, a group of nine perform-ers demonstrated an exercise with hamboo poles, various ensemble formations of the sticks and a comic gauntlet run. The demonstrators—save perhaps their Japanese leader—are not as agile as they might be, but they are still in the training stage. Their speed and movements are inferior to those of vaudeville tumblers, but certainly the idea here is correct. Every actor should learn balance, precision, graceful com-portment and, if possible, acro-batics.

U.K., Marathon Agree On Clyde Yard Terms

LONDON, April 28 (AP-DD) — for exploration in the North and farathon Manufacturing Co. and Irish Seas. The number of rigs le British government have greed on terms for the U.S. mpany's takeover of the Clyde-ank division of Upper Clyde-hipbuilders Ltd. (UCS), the govmment said today.

Christopher Chataway, Minister r Industrial Development, said as agreement is conditional on farathon reaching an accord ith labor unions.

Marathon is asking for astrances of labor peace at the ripyard, one of four UCS yards 18t went into receivership last immer. The other three yards nment-established company, ovan Shipbuilders Ltd.

Marathon plans to restructure ne Clydebank yard, formerly nown as the John Brown Shipard, to produce mobile offshore filling rigs and vessels to service ich rigs.

Government Aid Mr. Chataway said the govern-ent will provide Marathon with nancial assistance to restructure me yard under the local employent act and under the regional evelopment program.

. He said the sums involved will ot be announced for "commercial rasons."

Wayne Harbin, chairman and hief executive of Marathon, has reviously indicated that the comany would need about £12 milon in government assistance.

Mr. Harbin also refused to dislose the amounts involved in the peration, but he said his comany would provide "much greatr" financial resources for the roject than the government.

Demand Seen for Rigs He said Marathon hopes to tart work at the yard on July 4 and employ up to 2,000 men. Mr. Harbin said he foresees a big demand for oil drilling rigs operating in these areas is only a fraction of the number that will be required, he said.

The British government said recently that at least 224 exploration wells are to be drilled over the next six years in the offshore concessions that it recently awarded under the fourth round of allocations.

Mr. Harbin said the yard will be operated by a new Marsthon Marathon Shipbuilding Co. (UK) Ltd. He said he hopes the new company will "run into the black within the first few months of operation and stay that way."

The agreement was also wel-comed by union leaders, who have encouraged Marathon in its talks with the government and who have indicated that they would cooperate in trying to meet the labor peace assurances sought by the company. The agreement is "tremendous news," said William Robertson, chairman of the Clydebank shop stewards.

Dan McGarvey, an official of the Boilermakers Union, said after a meeting between Mr. Harbin and labor union officials that there is nothing to prevent a union-Marathon agreement.

He said a final meeting between Marathon executives and union officials will be held in Glasgow

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Swedish Firm Eyes New Caledonia

Grangesberg Co., a Swedish non-ferrous metal processing firm, has filed an application for the exploration of nickel in New Caledonia, official French sources report. The application is the third to be disclosed this month. The two previous ones involved Ste. Nationale des Pétroles d'Aquitaine in association with Freeport Minerals Co., of the United States, and an association between Pechiney-Ugine-Kuhlmann and Cofremi, a subsidiary of Patino Mines, of Canada. International Nickel Co., of Canada, is also awaiting French approval of a project in New Caledonia.

IBM German Unit to Build Plant

IBM Deutschland, a subsidiary of IBM World Trade Corp., says that it will build a plant at the new industrial area of Marienfelde, near West Berlin. IBM Deutschland noted that capital spending for the plant should amount to about 40 million deutsche marks. The firm plans to produce typewriters and copy machines at the plant, which will have about 1,000 workers and will start operations in the fall of 1973.

Mitsui, Carnation in Joint Venture

Mitsui reports it will form a joint venture with Carnation to produce and market pet food in Japan. Mitsui officials say the companies plan to seek Japanese government approval in May after working out details on the proposed equally-owned joint company. They deny, however, Japanese press reports that the joint company will eventually branch out into the production of food for human consumption if its pet food sales

For the quarter, construction awards rose to $19.65 billion from $15.92 billion. The March total puts the Dodge index at 159, also the average for the quarter, up from 155 in February, but below the peak of 165 in January. The seasonally-adjusted index uses 1967 as its base period of 100.

U.S. Auto Makers to Raise Output

Auto makers, banking on their predictions of a boom sales year, are planning to build $59,600 cars in U.S. plants in May, up 12.2 percent from 766,320 last May. This is the most optimistic May production schedule since 914,601 cars were built in May 1968. The production goal is generally in line with second-quarter output plans mapped out earlier, with every domestic auto maker scheduling production increases from 1-st May. GM leads the field with an expected increase of 18.8 percent, followed by American Motors, up 10.7 percent, Chrysler, 5 percent and Ford 2.7 percent.

Boise Cascade to Sell Some Assets

Boise Cascade is "talking now" with potential buyers for sale of what would amount to a minimum of $100 million of operating assets "for cash or near cash," Robert Hansberger, chairman, reports. He declines to identify the parts of the company being considered. But he says he bopes "to accomplish the sale by year-end. and certainly within the next 12-month period." Mr. Hansberger notes, however, that the sale will be outside the realty area, which the company is in the process of phasing out, and will be in addition to current negotiations to sell certain South American operations. He emphasizes that the company doesn't have liquidity or

Fed Banks' Reserves Increase By 22%

NEW YORK, April 28 (NYT),-Monetary expansion continued at a rapid rate in the last few weeks. the Federal Reserve System reported yesterday

The monetary aggregates, which measure varying aspects of the omy, all showed rapid rates of growth-in some cases markedly higher than was characteristic only a short time ago.

For example, total reserves of member banks averaged $32.7 billion in the four weeks ended Wednesday, which was equal to an annual growth rate of almost 22 percent from the level two months

Similarly, the "adjusted credit proxy," a measure of the total liabilities of Fed member banks that is used as an approximation of total bank credit, averaged $481.9 billion in the four weeks rate over the last two months. Since the beginning of the year, business borrowing calculated on this basis has risen well over $1 billion at banks outside New York. while declining about $500 million at banks based here.

Japan Sets Surplus High

TOKYO, April 28 (AP-DJ) .-Japan had a record balance of payments surplus in the fiscal year ended March 31, although the surplus for the month of March showed a sharp decline, Finance Ministry figures showed today.

The official results showed a Private oil sources in Madrid balance of payments surplus in March of $118 million, down from February's $661-million net inflow and down from the $522million surplus recorded a year earlier. estimates that only 10 percent

On April 14, the ministry estimated the March surplus as $130 million. Adjustments to many of the components of the overall balance led to the lower official total. Noteworthy among these was a $32-million addition to the provisional import total.

The official results for the balance of payments in fiscal 1971, ended March 31, 1972, showed a record overall surplus of $8,043 billion, more than quadruple last fiscal year's $1.999-billion net inflow. Full-year results were little changed from the estimates released earlier in the Reserves Decline The ministry also said today that foreign currency reserves declined in April for the first time since July, 1970, largely be-cause of government steps to reduce rising foreign currency boldings. The reserve totaled $16.535 billion at the end of April, down $128 million from the end of March, the ministry said.

Officials said the reserves declined because of a rise in shortterm money rates in the United States, a seasonal decline in the settlement of export bills, increased purchases of foreign exchange from the government's special foreign exchange fund for import financing, and government encouragement to utilize the large stocks of foreign currency.

Production Gains PARIS, April 28 (AP-DJ).-The

The government also reported that the mining and manufacturing production index rose for the fifth consecutive month in March, lending support to government views that the Japanese business recession has bottomed out.

DJ .- The optimistic air circulating three months ago through many corporate boardrooms in the U.S. was apparently more than the breath of wishful thinkers.

Profits are rising, and expectations for the full year generally remain highly cheerful.

These are the findings of a tabulation of first-quarter profits of U.S. corporations and of interviews with executives and securities analysis throughout the country. The survey shows that after-tax profits of 599 companies rose 11.7 percent in the first quarter from the like period last Substantial impetus for the total profit picture came from Detroit. Analysts say most of Detroit's surge can be attributed to fierce cost-cutting over the last few years and a growing tendency among car buyers to select top-of-the-line models and more optional equipment. An added fillip, they say, is coming from a boom in truck sales.

Profit expectations for the remainder of the year border on the euphoric. Furthermore, the makers believe imports. which have gobbled up year-toyear gains in the past, have been checked-meaning that any rise in industry sales over last year's record 10.3 million will all go to U.S. makers. The industry's current auto sales projection: 10.5

By contrast, it is believed that earnings of the giant steel industry would have been drastically lower had it not been for price ncreases posted during the last three quarters to offset the effects of a three-year labor pact signed last August. Despite these increases, however, firstquarter results for the industry were dragged down by a startiing decline—58.5 percent—in U.S. Steel's earnings for the quarter and a 24.6 percent drop from the prior year in Bethlehem Steel's

Gains by other major steel producers only partially offset the declines at the two top producers. The survey of 20 stee!makers finds profit off 20.1 percent. Analysts expected a secondquarter decline, out they are also predicting strong third and fourth quarters, which will lead to gains for the full year.

A look at the prospects for some other key industries follows: OIL: Chances for a secondquarter recovery from the first the Norwegian coast.

ward more normal levels as the heaviest motoring season begins. Even so, petroleum prices and demand are expected to remain below normal abroad. Costs and taxes continue to rise, and the pending sale of 20 percent interests in Middle East oil operations to host governments will likely further cut into second-half profits.

• NONFERROUS METALS: While most companies in the industry had earnings declines in the first quarter, the picture is Last summer's strike resulted in a wage settlement calling for a 30 percent increase over three years: companies say consequent higher wage costs, coupled with heavy expenditures to meet anti-

A SHAPING JOY Studies in the Writer's Craft

By Cleanth Brooks. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich. 393 pp. 575

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

Critic, Cleanth Brooks, in the introduction to this collection of his essays on the writer's craft, rejects such facile nomenclature. "Now it is bad enough," he writes, "to live under any label, but one so nearly meaningless as The New Criticism'—it is certainly not new-has peculiar disadvantages," and he proceeds to list some of them. But having done so, one almost suspects pro forms, he then proceeds to reconstitute himself as the New Critic he has just rejected. And he does so in the same introduction that contained his earlier repudiation. Once again Prof. Brooks asserts he is little con-cerned with the effect of the work of art on the reader ("The affective fallacy"). And he is against confusing the genesis of the work of art with its meaning ("The intentional fallacy"). He then spells out in brief what his intentions are: "Studies of the creative process and sociopsychological reports on reader response do have their own interest and they are valid literary studies. But it is the examina-tion of the work itself that seems to me to have the best claim to be called 'literary' criticism." The quoted sentence could stand for a definition of The New Criticism until a more extended one comes along. And who else but a New Critic would say, as Prof. Brooks does later on, that "Our age rejoices in having recovered Donne; but in doing so we have recovered not just Donne's poetry, but poetry." In the process of re-establishing his position, he provides openings for what might be called the other side. "The form of the achieved work," he writes, "is properly distinguished from the process that went into its making." But, isn't it important that, after Harvard, Robert Creeley went to Black Mountain and studied under Charles Olson instead of to Yale to study under Prof. Brooks? Isn't it likely then that "the form of the achieved work" would have been substantially different? It may be that Creeley's poetry doesn't rate high in Prof. Brooks's estimate, but if we take Creeley to stand for the informalist tradition that runs from Whitman through William Carlos Williams to Gary Snyder, it is hard to believe that the anti-academic stance of these writers had no bearing on the form of the resulting work. Is Dostoevski's preoccupation with the rape of a child merely a singular strand in his fiction or an obsessive element whose true function is to be found somewhere in the welter of his chaotic life? Can the last book of "Gulliver's Travels" be explained solely in terms of "closeness of grain" and richness of detail and their organic relationship to the work as a whole?

In the case of Cleanth Brooks, such questions and the responses are not new. As co-author of rewarding books on poetry, drama, fiction and literary criticism, as an editor of Southern Review (1935-42) and as author of "Modern Poetry and the Tra-

UNDERSTANDABLY wearied by dition" and "The Weil Wrong." being categorized as a New Urn," he has done as much any critic to teach a generaling how to read and to read in keeping the mind strictly on the text at hand. He has helped discredit facile historical relation ships in literary analysis and prevented the substitution of the author's biography for the seriof art. "A Shaping Joy" should prove as attractive to the literate reader as to the academician It is meaty enough to make a small feast.

As if to answer to the tharge that his critical approach is best applied to the study of poetry and falters when applied to lie tion, a number of chapters are devoted to novels and novelsts. Prof. Brooks shows what can be done by a close analysis of the opening of Joyce's "Ulysses" Using the word "dogsbody" ag a key, he uncovers Stephens awareness that man is beauty born and will be beastly dead and shows that this awareness is revealed in a pattern as tightly woven as an oriental rug.

His chapter on Poe nominates that writer as a proto-surrealist whose characters have a disembodied quality that removes them from the realms of the living and the dead. And a consideration of some of the less attractive figures who turn up in the work of Faulkner, Eudora Welty and Robert Penn Warren allows him to make judgments about the civilizing aspects of literature. It is not surprising that his concern for identifying the best in English letters as works of art is bound in with his feeling that literature is not designed merely to provide a tepid beth of sensual pleasure, but that it is a moral force for good.

The book is dotted with pungent epigrams that, extracted, would make a small anthology for future reading and continuous debate. Prof. Brooks's comments on poetry range in subtle argument from Milton and Donne to Eliot and Yeats. (He some-times seems to be overly attracted to the acknowledged masters.

Though his concern appears to be thoroughly formal and aesthetic, his own views of society show through. He sees manking as fallen from grace, and he therefore puts little stock in the chances for secular progress. He sees the binding forces of tradition, the sense of community so eroded that the contemporary artist is in a perpetual state of alienation. And he would argue that a faulty understanding of the past makes for the easy acceptance of the meretricious present. Predictably, therefore. he leans to regionalism in litera-ture, and of the American regions to the South, where the fact of evil cannot be explained away, where respect for tradition and skepticism of progress go hand in hand. It is one of the illuminating paradoxes of this book that the works of art that are allowed to say so little about their authors should be so revealing of the man who comments on them.

Mr. Lask is a book reviewer for The New York Times.

Another Ruling On 1968 Purse

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 28 (AP) -Eight days before the 1972 Kentucky Derby, Kentucky's highest court held today that the winner's purse for the 1968 derby must go to Forward Pass, not Dancer's Image.

The unanimous court of appeals decision reversed a circuit court and upheld the finding by the State Racing Commission, which had awarded the $122,600 first-place purse to Forward Pass, who finished second.

The commission had denied Dancer's Image a share of the purse, despite his first-place finish, after determining that the banned medication phenylbutazone was in the colt's system during the race. Today's decision is expected to be appealed to the U.S.

Supreme Court.

which had Riva Ridge going to New York if he disappointed today as he had in his previous start, the Everglades Stakes at Hislesh, where he finished fourth.

"Riva Ridge is just where I want him," Laurin said. "He's wonderfully relaxed. He does what he has to do."

for his colt the derby will be only the fourth outing of 1972 for Riva Ridge-Laurin said: "No, definitely not. He's where I want him. He's had two one-mile-andone-eighth races now, and countless other miles around the track, training in the morning. "It's very premature, I know, but if you were to ask me which of the triple crown races I fear the most—and I fear them all— I'd say it was the Preakness. Pimileo has an altogether different kind of track. But that will indicate to you how satisfied I am about this colt's derby preparation.

Five of the last 13 derby winners have tuned up by winning the Blue Grass: Tomy Lee. Cha teaugay, Northern Dancer, Lucky Debonair and Dust Commander. Proud Charlon and Decidedly advanced from second place in the Blue Grass to win the derby and two Blue Grass victors. Forward Pass and Arts and Letters, ran bang-up seconds at Churchill Downs.

"Riva Ridge did it so easily today, this one has to help him immensely in terms of the next one," Laurin said. "I guess the derby field will still be large. Frankly, I don't care about that any more. The last time Riva ran in a small field [the Everglades] the lockeys became so concerned with riding each other's horse they forgot about the race. In a big field, they won't do that."

A large derby field is assured.

Ouarter-Finals In Soccer Due Across Europe

LONDON, April 28 (Reuters). -Europe's eight top soccer countries clash this weekend in the quarter-finals of the European Cup of Nations.

Joint favorites to win the fourth competition in an event staged between World Cups are Italy, the defending champions, and England, 1966 world champions and third in Europe four years ago.

All quarter-finals will be played on a home-and-away basis and the matches this weekend are (home teams first); England-West Germany: Hungary-Romania: Italy-Belgium: Yugoslavia-Soviet Union. Return games will be played in two weeks.

SAN DIEGO, April 28 (NYT).--The San Diego Padres, a baseball franchise in deep financial trou-ble, dismissed Preston Gomez as manager yesterday and replaced him with Don Zimmer of the old Brooklyn Dodgers.

Zhumer, who is 41 years old. played 14 seasons in the major leagues as a utility infielder, then spent four years as a manager the minors. He was a coach with the Montreal Expos last season and returned to the Padres as third-base coach this spring. Zummer took over the club last night for the final game of its series against the New York Mets, which San Diego lost, 4-3.

The Padres have been in narrow straits, both on the field and at the box office, since they joined the National League in 1969. They finished last in the league's Western Division all three seasons but, more urgently, never drew more than 633,439 customers-in 1970. This year, they won four of their 11 games under Gomez and were selling only 8,200 tickets a game.

Consequently, the Padres have been expected to make a move for months-but of cities rather than managers.

As for the change in managers, "I feel that a change is necessary," said Buzzie Bavasi, president of the basebell club, who has worked with Gomez for 14 years with the Dodgers and Padres. "I slept on it all night, and didn't do much sleeping at I consider Preston Gomes an exceptionally well-qualified baseball man, and he can have a job in our organization any

The Ali Road Show Travels On

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, April 28 (NYT).— Shortly before Muhammad Ali set up the establishment he calls a training camp on a mink ranch in Pennsylvania, he visited an auto show in Philadelphia. "I'll take that one," he said, and drove home in a $22,000 Lamborghini that was just what he needed to complement the $36,000 Rolls-Royce, the $16,000 Cadillac, the $18,000 bus, the three Fords and the antique Oldsmobile already in the garage in Cherry In Miami a few weeks earlier he had bought a 27-foot yacht, gone for a moonlight cruise and run the $9,000 craft aground on an islet in Biscayne Bay, whence the Coast Guard rescued him. He owns a 70-foot house trailer (a steal at $7,500), stashed away at present on the mink ranch at Deer Park Lake near Reading, Pa., and another standing idle in Miami that cost $10,000. In addition to these appurtenances of gracious living, he expects to acquire a son or daughter on or about Monday, when he is scheded to fight George Chuvalo, the brave loser. The site of the match is Vancouver, British Columbia, whose residents have not laid eyes on a heavyweight champion or former heavyweight champion since Tommy Burns died there in 1955, It should not be inferred, however, that Canada's third largest city has no background as a boxcenter. Jack Johnson and Victor McLaglen, the movie actor. went six rounds to no decision there in 1909. As recently as 1931, Jack Dempsey boxed three exhibitions in one night, stiffening Big Tom Sawyer in the first round, going two rounds with Del Wolfe and one with Tiny Lamar.

39 Fights Ago

Both fighters are in Vancouver now, and most of the literature issuing from the scene deals with Luculian life style of the former champion. The implication is that the summertime of opulence has softened Ali physically and spiritually, that he is ready to be taken, and that everybody should make for the nearest television outlet and watch him come unstuck on closed-cir-

It is easy to believe that Ali is no longer as good as he thinks he is, partly because he never was. In the 13 months since Joe Frazier whipped him, he has been consorting with the likes of Jim-my Ellis, his sparring partner; ster Mathis, a miscast blimp; Jurgen Blin, a species of brat-

Now, as the Rangers await their first Stanley Cup playoff championship series in 22 years, the "business partners" loom as the most significant members of their celebrated cast. In the National Hockey League, a goaltender invariably is the difference in the playoffs. Or two goaltenders, as the custom is now.

The first game in the Stanley Cup Finals between the Rangers and the Boston Bruins will played Sunday in Boston.

"I don't know yet which goalie we'll open with," Francis keeps saying. "I'll decide at noontime the day of the first game."

Truth in Pain-Killing

Trace Commission has attacked the advertising claims of the nation's leading nonprescription pain-killers. In a strongly worded complaint, the FTC accused the major drug companies of making misleading and take claims about the effectiveness of their products. The main thrust of the complains is that, while most of the painkillers work, the drug companies, through advertising, give the false impression that there is a "significant dif-ference between the products."

My friend, Prof. Heinrich Appiebaum, believes that the FTC has gone too far. While he is an advocate of truth in advertising, he feels the government could do more damage than good by making the drug companies go honest.

"What they have not taken into consideration is the psychological effect that pain-killing advertising can have on a headache." Applebaum teld me in his Readache Research Laboratory incated at the end of the runway. at National Airport.

"In my studies. I have discovered that people are dependent on outrageous claims for pain-killers enters your bloodstream. That is to rid themselves of headaches, why more doctors recommend Let me show you." Applebaum took two volunteers and made them stand next to a plane tak-

"This is the fastest way we have of civing people headaches," he emplained. After the plane took off, he said to one volunteer, who was holding his head. "I am going to give you two aspirin." To the other volunteer he said. "I'm going to give you two Bufferin which relieves pain twice as just as aspiria. Now tell me when your headache goes away."

The person who took the Bufferin said in three minutes, "My headache is gone." The personwho took the aspirin voited six minutes and then said, "My headache is gone."

"You see." Applebaum beamed. "The psychological factor worked."

"Because the person 7thothought he had taken the Buf- ache."

ASHINGTON.—The Federal ferin really took aspirin. And the person who believed he had taken aspirin was really on Bufferin." "You're a sneaky guy. Professor," I said with great admiration. "Now, watch this experiment." The professor took a schoolteacher and placed her on a school bus with 43 grammar school children. Her face became strained and irritable and she started to scream at the children,

"I don't know what's wrong with me," she cried. David Janssen, the actor, got on the bus and gave her two Excedrin tablets and a glass of water, "A hospital study." Janssen told the teacher, "has revealed that it takes more than twice as many aspirin tablets to give the same pain relief as two Excedrin." In just two minutes the teacher was smiling and climbing all over the school bus sents and shouting. "I hope this trip never comes to "Fantastic!" I exclaimed. "Now, I'll show you another experiment." Applebaum had two of his lab assistants wheel a piano onto the runway. He then brought over a pianist whose fingers were wracked with arthritis. The pianist could not play a note. A man in a white coat came lieving pain 22 seconds after it Anacin than any other pain reliever." He gave the pianist two Anaein and a stonwatch, Exactly 22 seconds later, the planist started to hit the keys of the plano and played a Chepin sonata like it had never been placed before. Pref. Applebaum said. "If he hadn't known how long Anacin would take to work, that man could be sitting on his piano stool for the rest of the day wracked in pain." "You've proven that psychology certainly plays its role, Professor." I said. "As far as I'm concerned, advertising is the most important ingredient in a pain-killer. In the past, the only thing that saved the people in this country was knowledge that no matter how bad things got, they could always go down to the drugstore "But how can you be sure?" I and get 'fast, fast relief,' Now the covernment even wants to take the fun out of having a head-Mary Binme

Sam White's Paris

PARIS (IHT).—The French press follows the doings of Queen Elizabeth II with intense interest and inaccuracy, and since her state visit to France from May 15 to 19 was announced, considerable lineage has been devoted to her taste in hats (quel courage!), can French chefs cope with puddings, and will she bring a raincoat.

Excitement will mount as the Visit (one refers to it with a capital according to the unimpeachable authority of Nancy Mitford proceeds, but readers in search of the best gossib. inside dope and ruminations on the higher significance of the occasion will of course rush to read the reports of Sam White in London's Evening Standard.

The Visit, Sam White notes in advance, is important as a sign of real harmony between Britain and France. "They wouldn't embarrass Queenie if they expected fisticuffs between Pompidou and Heath later," he put it over pre-lunch martinis in the Crillon bar.

A tall, amiable Australian with an attractive, disabused face, Sam White celebrates in 1972 his 25th year with the Standard in Paris—a record, he claims, of uninterrupted service for the same newspaper unequalled by any other present-day correspondent.

"He is." a newspaper wrote of Sam White, "the sort of newspaperman who makes you think of H.M. Stanley and Hannen Swaffen and Clark Gable in It Happened One Night' enunciating down the telephone wires those magical words, 'Hold the front page.' He is the last legendary newspaper-

The fact that this description appeared in Sam White's own newspaper. The Evening Standard, may rob it of some of its punch, but a certain element of truth remains. Sam White is the only newspaperman who is the image of what a newspaperman is supposed to be-boozy, preternaturally sharp, charming, ruthless, a terrible typist, sentimental behind the cynical cigarette-in-the-corner-of-the-mouth facade. His column, "Sam White's Paris," appears Fridays with,

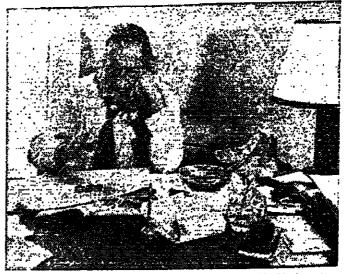

It is said, an accompanying rise in circulation. It is about 1,400 words long, usually surmounted with a logo of Sam White's aquiline profile made even sharper by a steeply-raked snap brim hat, and it starts with a hot lead story followed

Sam White's Paris may be no one else's Paris but it sounds a thrilling place. It is peopled inevitably by Rothschilds and academicians and also by cabinet ministers, shady financiers, escaped Russians, rock singers and royalty onthe Rainiers were not at home when I landed at Monte Carlo over the Easter weekend" is the opener for a recent column.

The result is marvelously readable, though irritating to some of Sam White's targets. He was mercilessly satirized in Nancy Mitford's "Don't Tell Alfred," which he thinks a rather poor book. "She had it in for me as did her friends Lady Diana and the Jebbs. The Jebbs could never forgive me for writing that Lady Jebb insisted that the bidets at the embassy

Sam White's relations with the current British Ambassador, Sir Christopher Soames, are, happily, very good. The embassy is a crucial source of information, but Sam White's main rounds consist of the three C's-the Coupole, Castel's and the Crillon bar where he is such a fixture that when they redecorated they gave him a large hunk of the old bar to put in his flat. Luckily they warned me when they tore it down or they might have had to remove me with it." Sam White says. He first came to Paris on the day of the liberation as reporter for an Australian paper. He came back in 1947. having been hired, to his vast astonishment, for the Evening Standard by Lord Beaverbrook.

Odile Montserrat.

In Australia before the war Sam White had been a member of the Communist party expelled for bourgeois bohemianism. He got along beautifully with Lord Beaverbrook:

Sam White

"Fundamentally, he was a radical, a populist. He was also extraordinarily well-read and sophisticated, with a genuine love of newspapers. The column was very much infinenced by Beaverbrook. He was absolutely marvelous to me in times of trouble. He was very stimulating terribly trying and of course scary. I took obvious precautions. I never went to see him without having a few gins."

Sam White was not a Gaullist because he doesn't see how an Englishman could be, but he was a staunch admirer and plans one day to write a book called "De Gaulle and Other Scandals." He never asks questions at presidential press conferences, considering this the exclusive right of French journalists, but he is an enthusiastic behind-the-scenes mover. One of his most sensational feats occurred when the Quai d'Orsay was, he says, putting it about that the CIA was behind

Gen. Challe's coup in Algeria. Sam White killed the rumor by bringing it to light at an Anglo-American Press Club luncheon where he publicly asked the American ambassador what he intended to do about the

"The man from the Quai froze and said either this man goes or I do. That killed the rumor dead. Next day I received a case of whisky with a card saying, "This is from some American friends who did not back Challe but who do back you." When he first came to Paris in 1947, Sam White says, "the Paris job was sheer escapism for English readers. It changed gears almost automatically. You can almost fix the date—1958 when Gen, de Gaulle came back. Aside from the understandable wish for escapist nonsense, French politics before De Gaulle were absolutely meaningless, you'd find yourself writing a language no one could understand."

The present era of good will between Britain and France is a relief to Sam White, who says he suffered acutely during the frost. As a symbol of good will Queen Elizabeth's Visit is of undeniable importance. Sam White trusts that the Standard will send over a reporter to follow the details of the trip while he will do an analysis of its implications.

"That means," he explains, "that I'll be in the Crillon bar as her plane touches down."

Because of a typographical error, Robert Wise was misquoted in my story (IHT, April 27). The line should have read "Never be first to be second."
